

Devin G. Atallah, PhD, doctorate in Clinical Psychology from UMass Boston, currently is a postdoctoral fellow at the National Research Center for Integrated Natural Disaster Management (CIGIDEN) in Chile. Dr. Atallah recently completed a postdoctoral fellowship at Department of Global Health and Social Medicine with Harvard Medical School. His decolonial community praxis, clinical work, and participatory research focuses on promoting resilience and racial justice, in partnership with marginalized, racialized, and indigenous communities transnationally facing intersecting adversities, historical trauma, and ongoing structural violence, such as, settler colonialism, racism, poverty, discrimination, and socio-natural disasters.