

Bio: Andrew Pomerville is a doctoral student in the Department of Psychology at the University of Michigan, in the department's Clinical Science area. Andrew is broadly interested in research pertaining to: psychotherapy, coercion in mental health treatment, and health equity for Indigenous populations and LGBT people. His mentor at the University of Michigan is Dr. Joseph P. Gone. Andrew's most recent research concerns mental health treatment for Indigenous populations, particularly in the United States and Canada. He received a B.A. in Psychology and Sociology from the University of Massachusetts Boston, where he worked with Dr. Heidi M. Levitt. Andrew's undergraduate research concerned client experiences in psychotherapy and the development of qualitative forms of meta-analysis. He has also worked on projects related to LGBT mental health and interventions for LGBT people.
