

IP--seeking new PhD student...

From: Devin Atallah <abujoaquin@gmail.com>

Dear Louise, could you please send this out to the Indigenous Psychology list-serve in case folks know of any students who already graduated with a masters degree in psychology, counseling, or related-field, and may now be interested in going for a PhD?

Here is my announcement:

Devin G. Atallah, PhD, Clinical Assistant Professor of Counseling Psychology & Applied Human Development, at Boston University School of Education (<http://www.bu.edu/sed/profile/devin-g-atallah/>) is looking for 1 doctoral applicant interested in working in Dr. Atallah's new lab focusing on family and community resilience, trauma, and global mental health equity from decolonial and antiracist perspectives. This could include becoming involved with one or more of Dr. Atallah's developing community-based participatory research projects in partnership with: (a) public schools and grassroots organizations locally in urban Boston, (b) Mapuche indigenous communities in Chile, and (c) Palestinian communities in United Nations refugee camps in the West Bank. Prospective students that are passionate about the intersections of mental health and social justice are encouraged to apply, in addition to people of color, and/or Spanish- or Arabic- speaking bilingual/bicultural applicants.

To apply see: <http://www.bu.edu/sed/academics/graduate/doctor-of-philosophy/doctor-philosophy-counseling-psychology-applied-human-development/> Application Deadline is December 12, 2017

Thank you,
-Devin

---

Devin G. Atallah, PhD

Clinical Assistant Professor

Counseling Psychology & Applied Human Development

School of Education | Boston University

Two Silber Way | Boston, MA 02215

Email: datallah@bu.edu

Webpage: <http://www.bu.edu/sed/profile/devin-g-atallah/>